

Marko Pogacnik his view of Devas

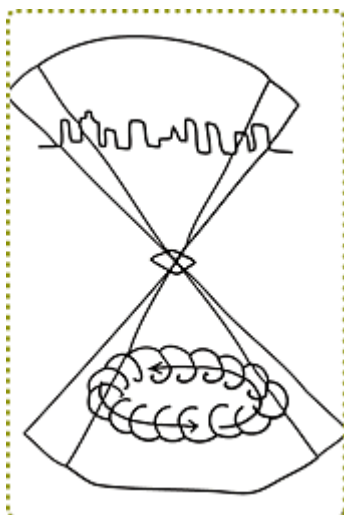

Marko's first and most significant book, "Nature Spirits and Elemental Beings - Working with the Intelligence in Nature" (first published in English by Findhorne press in 1996) has been well received. In it he freely discusses many classes of Devas from plant elementals to huge Landscape Angels. Marko perceives and draws Devas in his own unique style. His perceptions are somewhere between the European Goddess mythic and the more 'Eastern' Theosophical descriptions. The book is certainly well worth reading. Marko's web site is <http://www.markopogacnik.com/healing.html>.

The description of the book set out below is from site https://www.biodynamics.com/catalog/nature-spirits-2nd-edition-pogacnik

Pogacnik encourages us to find a quiet spot to meditate and converse with these beings so that we may re-establish the ancient connection between humanity and these real and powerful realms of Earth. The effort adds a fresh and vibrant quality to current environmental concerns. Yes, there are elves at the bottom of your garden, so go talk to them!

Although a lot has been written in recent years about nature spirits, Nature Spirits & Elemental Beings is remarkable in that almost everything described in the book is based on the author's own practical experiences in communicating with these beings through meditation and tuning in to plants, trees, animals and the landscape. He describes in detail the various elemental beings and their roles in maintaining the web of life, and also gives insights into related topics, such as the flow of energies within the landscape and the long-suppressed Goddess culture. His evocative images of the nature spirits draw our attention to the lost harmony of the natural world which has been disrupted by the impact of human culture. It is a tragic situation but one which can be redeemed if we rediscover our long-lost sensitivity to these realms and, as the author demonstrates, learn to heal the disturbed elemental world.

Author Bio: Slovenian artist Marko Pogacnik has an international reputation in conceptual and land art. Through his work he has developed the skill of Geomancy as a tool for unlocking the hidden wisdom of the Earth. He leads workshops throughout the world in Earth Healing and advises communities and businesses in landscape planning.